Abstract:

In the past couple of decades, our understanding of embeddings of finite metrics has benefitted greatly from a fruitful collaboration between mathematicians and theoretical computer scientists. In this talk, I will give a tour of some of these questions about finite metrics that arise in theoretical computer science. En route, we will encounter embeddings into normed spaces, dimension reduction, metric Ramsey phenomena, and local-versus-global questions in metric spaces.